ABOUT THE SEMINAR

Gender equity and women empowerment are the vital areas of concern of present academia. Empowerment can be considered as the key through which the goal of gender equity can be achieved. It is noteworthy that like in other parts of the world the human capital of women are undervalued and underutilized in India in general and in North East India in particular. Since women constitute almost half of the population, due to the gender gap in different aspects of society, their potential contributions to economic advances and social progress of the country have been marginalized. The proposed seminar will focus on the importance of gender equity to achieve sustainable development in India in general and North East India in particular. It is noteworthy that, the levels of development as well as gender gap in educational, socio-cultural and economic spheres are different amongst the states of North East India. The seminar will highlight on pertinent issues with regard to gendered nature of house work, work force participation, division of labour and overall women's position in society in North-East India. The seminar will try to address the issues like importance of gender equity, problems of gender equity in socio-economic and political spheres, gender segregation, challenges of women empowerment in North East India, etc.

OBJECTIVE OF THE SEMINAR

The main objective of the seminar is to highlight the importance of gender equity to achieve sustainable development in India in general and in North East India in particular. In this regard, through this seminar it is expected that the academic community will try to figure out the issues related to gender equity and allied social dimensions in the context of North East India, and will offer recommendations to address the same.
